Jackie Ganter & Howes A Tycoon Find Wealth at WPRA World Finals

By Tanya Randall

The Extraco Events Center in Waco, Texas, has been very good to Jackie Ganter. She set an arena record on a standard pattern in the Pavilion Arena and won the 2015 WPRA Junior World Championship in the Coliseum.

"I've had a lot of success at that facility, whether it was in the coliseum or in the other arena," said Ganter, a two-time National Finals Rodeo qualifier. "I love Waco. It's been very good to me over the years."

At the 2018 WPRA World Finals, the Abilene, Texas, barrel racer completely changed her fortunes with a $8,510 Championship in the Cardholder's Race. With a special ground rule designation from the WPRA, money from the Cardholder's Race counts toward the 2019 WPRA World Standings and the top two finishers earn a bye into Rodeo Houston, the most lucrative event on the winter run.

"I'm so excited!" exclaimed Ganter, who pocketed more than $11,726 at the WPRA World Finals. "That was my only goal—to get into San Antonio and Houston—after I didn't have the year I needed to have. I placed a little bit, but I darn sure didn't win what I needed to. I ended up 48th in the (WPRA World Standings), not good enough to get into those rodeos. I was pretty disappointed. Everybody told me not to give up. There are still ways to get in. I thought, 'Well, probably not this year.' I did enter a few of rodeos here at the beginning of the year and placed at one of them. I just didn't see that coming. I really didn't."

In the first round, Ganter and her newest equine partner, Howes A Tycoon, placed fourth in the first round and third in the second round to lead the average on two going into the short round.

"After my first round, I was like 'Whoa!' After my second, I thought, 'Wow, I could get into Houston,'" she said. "My grandma (Jo Smith) couldn't be there with me this weekend. She usually goes with us everywhere, especially when we're in Texas. She knew that the top two got into Houston. She said she couldn't eat, couldn't sleep, couldn't do anything until after I ran in the short round. It was a lot of fun."

In the short round, Ganter had to push aside her own mental insecurities, by tuning out what was happening around her. Unfortunately, the task was made even more challenging by following Lacinda Rose, her closest challenger, in the drag.

"I tried really hard not to listen in the short round," she ex-

It was a little hard when the person who was sitting second behind me ran right before me. You can try not to listen, but you're still going to hear it. There were a couple of .9s in my drag and I thought 'Oh this is getting a little tough.' Then Lacinda ran a .2, and I thought, 'Oh, I don't need to hit.' Coming into a short round like that, you usually either need to be really fast or just be clean. When Lacinda ran, I thought 'Oh, I just don't need to hit. Then I thought, 'Don't think that. Just go make the same run you've made the last two days.'"

While they ended up second in the short and first in the aggregate, Tycoon made her work for a clean final run.

"He got a little short with me at the second and I thought we weren't going to get around it," she admitted. "I rode him two handed way longer than I usually do, and he's entirely too powerful for that. I thought I was going to get ejected there for a second, but I stayed on him or he stayed under me—one of the two! It was

Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo and Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association (PRCA) officials announce a new multi-year partnership that focuses on growing the sport of rodeo for the benefit of fans and the contestants, with earnings from the RODEOHOUSTON® Super Series counting toward qualification for the NFR, the season-ending championship event for the PRCA.

"This unique partnership combines the brand strengths of two of the biggest names in rodeo to grow the sport for fans and athletes alike, while allowing us to maintain our current presentation," said Joel Cowley, Rodeo president and CEO. "This partnership is one that makes all of rodeo better," PRCA CEO George Taylor said. "RODEOHOUSTON is one of the richest rodeos in the sport. Northeast Community College adds Rodeo to its Intercollegiate Athletic Program

Officials at Northeast Community College in Norfolk, Neb., announced that rodeo will become the 10th intercollegiate athletic program at the Norfolk-based college beginning in fall 2019. "Rodeo is a popular sport across the region among high school students. Northeast Community College wants to give those students the opportunity to pursue their passion to take part in the competition the sport offers while earning their college degree with us," said Kurt Kohler, dean of student life and athletics in an article at <http://kticradio.com>. "Also, with agriculture as the college's largest academic program, rodeo is a natural fit and is relevant to the curriculum that is offered." Kohler said the program will provide additional student-athletes opportunities to compete for Northeast.

fun. He made three really fun runs. Running barrels for him is really effortless; he just kind of glides."

Tycoon started his barrel racing career with his breeder Randy Jarvis under the name RLJ Dashing Debonair. At the 2012 BFA World Championships, Gayle Howes bought the gelding, by Streakin Again out of RLJ Callinallangles [sic], by Knock Their Socksoff.

Ganter, who was struggling without the use of her two superstars Guys French Jet ("Jet") and Blazin Baby J ("Baby J"), got the offer to ride Tycoon at the Wainwright, Alberta, pro rodeo.

"It was kind of crazy," Ganter explained. "Gayle Howes called me and asked if I wanted to ride one of her horses at Wainwright. She didn't say which horse, but I said, 'Sure.' I knew she had a lot of nice horses and I wasn't winning anything, so it couldn't be any worse than what I was doing."

The horse that Howes offered was Tycoon, whom the Ganters inquired about purchasing two years ago.

"I said, 'Is this the horse we tried to buy two years ago?'" Ganter asked Howes. "She said, 'Yes, it is.' I said, 'I'd love to ride him.' So, I drove to Wainwright a couple of days early and rode him in the arena. The ground wasn't worked or anything yet for the rodeo. I only trotted him through the pattern."

With Ganter uncomfortable with running Tycoon in the first round of Wainwright with just a trot-through under her belt, Howes let her take the gelding to a jackpot. Ganter won the jackpot on Marthas Sixshooter, whom her mother Angela has since claimed as her own, and placed second on Tycoon.

"It was a tough jackpot," recalled Ganter. "Most of the rodeo girls were there. So, Gayle was excited and I was excited. I was for sure riding him in the first round of Wainwright. Slack was the next morning and I ended up winning the round on him."

Unfortunately, the ground was a little problematic in the short round with man-made mud.

"I was last to run because they ran it slowest to fastest," she said.

THE RUNDOWN w/ Jackie Ganter

Howes A Tycoon, "Tycoon" 16.3 hands, 1,500 lbs.

"He's massive," said Ganter. "He's the biggest horse that I've ever run barrel on and I ride big horses. He makes some of my other horses look like ponies."

SHOEING: Size 2 shoe. Rims all the way around. "He wears a pad on his left front. When you see something like that you think it's a red flag. There's nothing wrong with that foot, it's just how his angles are. My vet said something about changing it, and I'm like, 'Nope, I'm not changing it.'"

FEED: Hi Pro Oats & a little Hi Pro Performance

HAY: Alfalfa, some coastal if he's bored.

SUPPLEMENTS: Vita-Flex Electrolytes, Master's Hoof Blend, Red Cell, Equi-Bone by TLC Nutrition; daily dose of UlcerGard

ALTERNATIVE THERAPIES: Equi-Resp "Right before the WPRA Finals, we had some breathing issues come up and I used my Equi-Resp religiously. I used it every single day leading up to the Finals and every day at the Finals. It really got his lungs cleared up and made a huge difference."

CONDITIONING/TRAINING REGIMEN: "I try to keep him exercised. I long trot him some and lope him some. He's so big and so strong it takes quite a bit of riding to keep him rode down. I have to work at keeping him backed off. I do work him on the barrels. I think he does better if you slow work him. I actually exhibited at Waco. I just trotted, but I think it made a big difference. He's so big, he kind of gets his feet tangled up, so if you remind him to stay quick in his feet, it helps him a lot. I really work on roll backs and spinning him, just keeping his feet sharp and him paying attention."

"I didn't know how to ride him in the mud. I completely ran him way by all his barrels. I think I was a second off. It was not good."

Prior to that fiasco, Ganter and her mother had talked about trying to purchase the gelding again.

"I love him and I wanted to try to buy him, but after that run Mom was like 'Do you still want to try to buy him?' I said, 'I don't know. That was pretty rough.' Mom said we should base it off the jackpot and first round. We talked to Gayle, and it took three or four hours to talk her into pricing him and setting up a vet check. He passed the vet check with flying colors and everywhere I took him after that he did great," she said.

"Gayle just says he's been her 'Old lady horse,' because he would always go her speed. If she wanted to go faster, he'd run; if she wanted to go slower, he took care of her," said Ganter. "He hasn't been run that much. She just goes to the Canadian Rodeos that she likes and the ground is good. He's basically made a couple of runs a month for the past six years. She told me he hasn't gone as fast as I'm asking him to run in a long time, probably since he was a baby. It may have taken a few runs to get shake the rust off and get the air back in his lungs. He's been doing great."

Ganter also has Jet and Baby J back up and running. They'll go to their first jackpot back this weekend.

"I've been back on them since I got home (from the Northwest)," said Ganter. "I took them to my vet on Wednesday (prior to the WPRO World Finals) and he looked at them both. Right now, everything is looking really good for both of them."

This weekend, Ganter is going to a barrel race in Texas, while her mom starts the long trek north for the Canadian Finals Rodeo. Ganter flies up to Canada to join her mother on Monday.

Afterward, it's just waiting to see if her earnings hold to make the cutoff for San Antonio, the second richest winter rodeo.

"The only rodeo I have left before the cutoff (for San Antonio) is Odessa," she explained. "I get to sit around and wait and watch everyone run at their circuit finals until Odessa. I think after this weekend, I'm third or fourth in the world and they take the Top 9 out of the current standings into San Antonio. Everyone's circuit finals count, but I didn't make mine. I talked to Ann Thompson and she thinks I'm sitting pretty good. I probably just need to win a good check at Odessa to hang in there."

Ganter wanted to thank the WPRO World Finals crew and WPRO President Doreen Wintermute for the great production, prizes and added money.

"I go to the WPRO Finals every year," she said. "I think it's a great race. There's a lot of opportunities there. The prizes were exceptional. I appreciated that and their hard work. The ground was great. I always enjoy going there."

Other WPRO World Finals News

Clinton, Tennessee, barrel racer Carly Taylor and her PC Frenchmans Hayday, Bully Bullion mare Diva Deniro will get to make the call-in to Rodeo Houston, courtesy of the WPRO World Finals. The WPRO rookie and her 7-year-old mare finished second in the Cardholder's Race Aggregate just ahead of 2018 WPRO Rookie Champion Jimmie Smith and Lena On The Rocks. They will start the season with a $5,328 boost to their earnings.

2007 WPRO World Champion Kay Blandford and her home-bred KB Angel Ta Fame ("Diva") nearly swept the Futurity for a $4,067 Championship. The pair from Sutherland Springs, Texas, almost made the cutoff for Rodeo Houston too, finishing fourth in the Cardholder's Race for an additional $4,457. Diva, a 4-year-old mare, is by all-time leading barrel horse sire Dash Ta Fame out of Blandford's 2007 World Champion and former WPRO Futurity Champion Talents Dark Angel, by Flaming Talent.

Stephenville, Texas, barrel horse trainer Nisa Berry double-dipped at the WPRO World Finals, winning the Permit Holder's Race and the Derby with VF Look Im Back ("Picasso"). Berry and Picasso won the third-run Permit Holder's average for $3,571 and the two-run derby for $4,760. Owned by Berry and Erin Zoucha, Picasso is a 6-year-old daughter of Eddie Stinson out of Strikin Back, by De Best Cash, and was bred by Victory Farms.

Rule and High Valor Dominate Prairie Circuit Finals

By Amy Wilson

It has been said that good things come to those who wait, but it has also been said that good things come to those who work to make them happen. For Dona Kay Rule and High Valor, both are true. The time and work involved in their process paid off at the Ram Prairie Circuit Finals as they won all three rounds and the finals championship after winning the average by a half second. All totaled, she earned $8,329. "I was back there bawling my eyes out. I felt very, very blessed and sure feel like it's a gift. I hope I'm worthy is the honest truth," a humble and sincere Rule said about her reaction to winning.

Rule explained how she approached each day with her 9 year old gelding. "When I got there on Friday, the most important thing I had in mind was to set him up for a good run for him – see how the ground would treat him and how hard or straight I needed to send him. Those things are all variables on each different horse. The second day, I knew the ground would hold him – they did a great job with the ground – so I asked for just a tick more, but I was fairly safe knowing all those other wonderful horses were entered. The last day I thought, well let's send him from the back 40 and let him have it, and he took it all very well."

Rule lives in Minco, Oklahoma which is only about 60 miles from Duncan. That allowed her friends and family to be there to cheer her on, including her daughter and son, and her husband, John. "My husband is a longtime rodeo guy, saddle-maker, from a rodeo family, and understands the work it takes. He's generally pretty stoic and helpful. He was delighted and clapping his hands – everyone was joking with him about grinning so much. That made my heart smile," she said. Rule also pointed out that John is enjoying success as well. He makes saddles part time, and he's active in making bronze sculpture art and will be displaying his artwork in the Small MT Barrel Daze Continued From Page 33 children and also owning National Saddlery in the Oklahoma City Stockyards for 30 years, to now being able to focus more on training barrel horses and rodeoing. "I'm just amazed how this has gone. It's been wonderful. It's nice to be old enough to be able to dedicate the time I need to for this. Before we had a business and a family. Now they have their own families and we've sold our business so it's been pretty fun to take the time and get to go and I'm very grateful for this gift, I sure am."

Rule's goal for 2018 was to go to some of the big shows and see if Valor could handle the different ground conditions, noise, and everything that exists at rodeos, and to see if they could make the Prairie Circuit Finals. "He exceeded everything I'd hoped for honestly." Then she added, "The Prairie Circuit Finals Rodeo Committee – as with almost all the circuit committees – work tirelessly to have a good event, so it's pretty important to go participate and be part of that." Now Rule, who's 61 years young, has a bigger goal. "We'd all like to go to the NFR. I kind of felt like I was way past my chance, but this is one of those horses that it could happen as long as he can stay sound and all the stars line up for me," she said.

Rule grew up in rodeo as her dad rode bareback horses and team roped. As an adult, she went to work for Billy Perrin in the 1970's. His daughter, Jackie Jo Perrin, won the WPRA Barrel Racing World Championship in 1977 at only 13 years old. "I learned so much from him, and so much from everybody I've come across. You'll never know enough, but I've tried to learn horsemanship and to train. I primarily rope though," Rule said. She has competed in team roping, breakaway, and tie-down roping, and went to the PWRA Finals 9 times in multiple events. "Barrels were my income and roping was for fun. Now the barrels are becoming quite fun. When you win it's a whole lot more fun," she said with a laugh.

Rule described her training process as quieter than most, "It takes me a long time." Valor, who is by Valiant Hero and out of Rare High, took extra time. "He was pretty silly when I first got him. He's all race-bred and typically I like cow-bred," Rule said. "You could tie him to the trailer when he was a little guy and he would buck and rear and flip and paw and do all kinds of stuff. I had to spend a lot of time talking to him and getting him to gentle down and slow his mind down," she remembers. "Joy Wargo one time said, 'You have to spend time with them, just time'...even if you're brushing on them, just letting them understand you and you watch them and understand them. We did a lot of trail riding and a lot of pasture work. We went to lots and lots of events and didn't enter anything, just rode in and out of the alley, and around and around, under the flags, and that sort of thing." Valor was in the shadows until Rule's main horse, Juice, got hurt. "When he stepped up, he really decided that he knew how and went to work," she said. He counts on Rule and she counts on him. "By his body language I can understand that he needs me to slow him down and get his attention, or just be there and let him work." He's gentle now for Rule, but he doesn't behave like that for others. "My daughter ran him at BBR this year because I'm the judge and arena director there. She was like, 'my goodness mom I had no idea what you did because you just look like you're sitting there'. There's a lot more to it than that," Rule said, adding that he's really big and powerful.

Rule and Valor will now represent the Prairie Circuit, along with the Year-end Champion, Kylie Weast, at the Ram National Circuit Finals Rodeo in Kissimmee, Florida. "I don't know what to expect, but I hope it goes well. I've never been East. Usually I stay central or go West, so I'm anxious to go and happy that I'm getting the opportunity," Rule said.

Weast placed in every round at the Ram Prairie Circuit Finals to finish second in the average and earn the Year-end Championship. She is headed to her first NFR this December, as is Tracy Nowlin who tied for fourth in the average. "Our circuit is so tough," Rule said. She also pointed out her appreciation for Prairie Circuit rodeos and committees, "Each of the committee's I've spoken with have long histories and third and fourth generation committee members and it's important to each one of them. I don't know if you can single out a rodeo, but Woodward and Elk City are especially dear to my heart. Pretty Prairie worked so hard to make the ground better this year. They all put their heart and soul into it."

Headin' For Home

"Classic" by Sherry Morrison
Triple M (Mike Morrison Ministries)

In the last couple of weeks, the Lord has been prompting me to read the Bible from HIS perspective instead of the world's perspective. In the world, there always seems to be a "subtraction" mentality. We think God is always trying to "take something from us", when truly He is a God that "multiplies and blesses."

For instance.....Luke 6:38 says to "give...." We hear, "God wants to take your money". The rest of the verse is "and it will be given to you, PRESSED DOWN, SHAKEN TOGETHER AND RUNNING OVER." Galatians 6:7 says in part, "you reap what you sow." We hear, "God is going to get you when you're bad."

But turn that around and if you are helping, giving, speaking kind and being loving, then THAT is what we are going to get! In one day, God showed me 4 verses in the Bible that people mentally turn around to a negative instead of reading and enjoying the Blessing that God promises us.

I think I stripped some mental gears trying to stop my worldly perspective of the Word of God. But it was AWESOME to see things from God's, not man's, point of view!! Try it, you'll like it!!!!
