Ashley Schafer & French Streakin Slew Top BBR Southern Territorial Finals Futurity

By Tanya Randall

Ashley Schafer and French Streakin Slew (“Lou”) topped the 48-entry, $15,000-added Futurity at the BBR Southern Territorial, held October 2-4 in Glen Rose, Texas. Their victory in the futurity was worth $5,189.

After working well at the Ardmore Futurity the prior weekend, Schafer had high hopes for Lou, a horse she says has taken her out of her comfort zone, at Glen Rose. However, it was already looking to be extremely tough before they made their first run.

“I was in the first drag,” she explained, “and there had already been two 15.0s and I thought, ‘Holy Moly! This is going to be a tough little futurity!’”

She knew she was going to have to let the lanky gelding use his speed if they were going to be competitive.

“I don’t stand on him by any means, but I’m getting to the point to where I can let him go and he’s fast enough that you don’t really have to ask for much,” she said. “I can let him roll in there and he’s getting really solid about melting to my seat and coming back to his turns really nice. I let him roll quite a bit harder the last couple weekends, like at Ardmore and this weekend at Glen Rose. I had been easing him there until he could figure out his footwork at the first barrel a little bit better.”

At Glen Rose, Lou rose to the occasion in the first round, with a second-place run of 15.006 in the first round.

“I let him roll up in there and he inhaled it,” Schafer said. “I knew he was good from there because his second and third are always really good. I kind of stood on him from there and he made a nice solid run.”

On their next run, they were just 1/10th slower with a 15.138 that was eighth in the second round.

“The next day I thought just do the same thing,” she explained, “just go make that same solid run. Don’t try to be faster, just try to be solid again. He felt really good.”

Owned and bred by Donna Workman, the 4-year-old gelding is by 2020’s breakout stallion French Streaktovegas, who has sired three different futurity champions this year, out of After School Lou, who’s sire and dam were both by Thoroughbreds. When Workman’s daughter Andrea Enzenauer took Lou to Schafer in early spring of his third year, she was expecting a short, stocky roan, but a tall, lanky sorrel stepped off the trailer.

“He takes more after his mother, who goes back to Seattle Slew and Native Dancer,” Schafer noted. “Lou is a lot different style than what I typically ride. If I had a quarter for every time I’ve heard, ‘That does not look like something that you would ride,’ I would be rich. He’s very racy-looking. He’s beautiful, but he’s long, lanky, thinner made. He really looks like a racehorse.”

Schafer says training Lou has been a “learning curve” for her because of his body style.

“He’s more of a late bloomer too,” she said. “I think more those bigger-type horses like him take a little bit longer to come into their own. They’re kind of like the big kid they put under the basket in basketball. He’s not really coordinated, but he can make the basket. That’s kind of how Lou was. He was a little bit awkward at first and had little bit of trouble learning where to place his feet.”

She says Lou has really started to come into his own recently.

“Here recently the light bulb has come on and he’s just gotten better and better,” she said. “I knew it was there. When he was a 3-year-old, I was like, this is my best colt, because he worked so good, but getting it put together with all the speed that he has was a real struggle. He’s placed along here and there and was the bottom of the 1D at some big races, so we knew it was there because he gave us glimmers of it. We just had to be patient and let him come along.”

Schafer was especially appreciative of Workman and Enzenauer for their patience.

“I told them I thought he was a really nice colt, but I thought his style would fit someone else better,” she said. “I’m so grateful they asked me to keep him because I’ve learned a lot about horses that are that kind. I have one for next year that I think is the same way. It’s a little out of my comfort zone and helped me grow as a trainer. I’m very appreciative for that because they were super awesome about that. You don’t always get that opportunity.

“I think a lot of it was just waiting him out and letting him come into it. Sometimes we forget that these young horses don’t all make futurity horses and some take longer than others. Especially on a horse like him because he is so talented, if people will wait it out, even if they don’t win as much as another one, you have something in the end, you have something you can sell or go on with. I can’t thank them enough for being so patient and letting him come into his own, because not all owners will do that.”

Lindsay Schulz's Spiral Drill

While Lindsay Schulz is a big fan of Paul Humphrey's Breaking the Mold Drills, her personal favorite is her own version of the classic spiral, or corkscrew drill. She uses it as both a warm-up and tune-up for both colts and finished horses to work on full body control and collection while keeping the horse light in the bridle.

"The whole point of that drill is forward motion," said Schulz, a barrel horse trainer from Moses Lake, Washington. "I want it to feel like the rib cage coming up to me and them still driving that hind end and being able to move across. It's basically to get them loosened up—get their rib cage up so they can move their shoulders over so they can push back out into that big circle."

To execute the drill, start by loping a large circle and progressively make them smaller. As you approach a barrel-sized circle, melt into a seated trot with your elbow straight back towards the back seat of your saddle to reinforce collection and rate. Make a barrel-sized circle in that tight job while keeping forward momentum with the horse's ribcage and backend engaged. Then open the circle back up while urging the horse to canter.

"If they're struggling and breaking down when you're wanting them to come into that seated trot—maybe they're still loping off or they just don't want to come back and come tight to you—I'll let them come to a stop and bring their nose to my knee and I push them back out with my inside leg and get their feet moving again before I try coming back down. I do push them back out if they don't have that forward motion," she said.

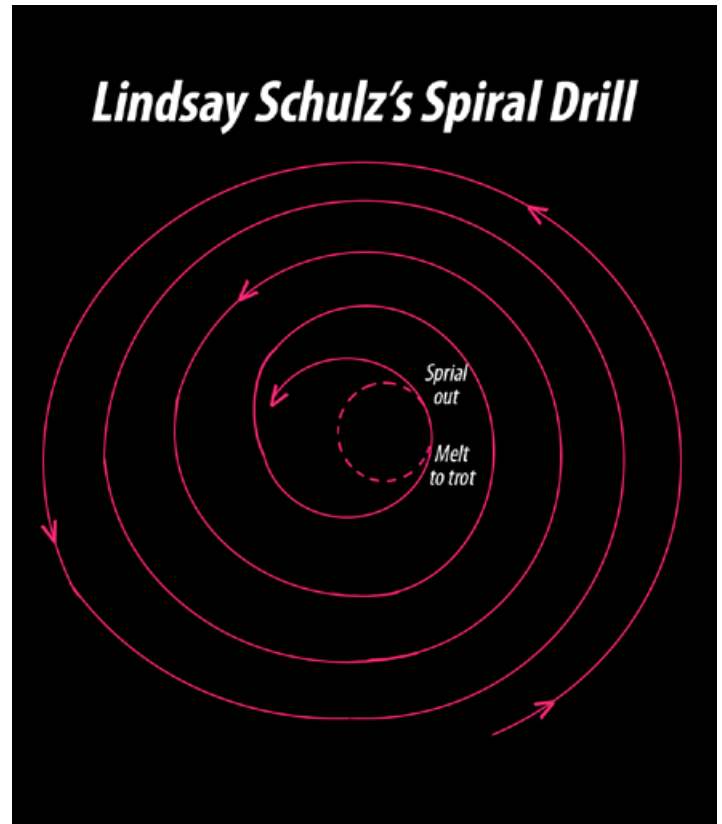

Schulz likes to use Dave Elliot rope draw bit when warming up or tuning up because it gives her a lot of feel.

"I like to pull back to my hip a little bit and really get them to flex and break that poll and come to me," she notes.

She also uses her outside rein to keep the horse balanced, but she uses it in such a way that she's preparing them for being ridden one-handed later.

"I use the outside rein to bump that shoulder back up to me," she explains. "Ultimately I want to be able to ride my horse one handed, so I'll have my outside hand higher and the rein is pretty loose for the most part. When I have it out higher they can be a little more accountable for themselves, but I do have it with me, so I can draw that outside shoulder back up to me to square them up and balance them back out."

"Everything I do in my drills and slow work I want to be able to pass that right into my run. Long story, short, you go to run your horse and you let it all hang out, but you've trained two-handed up until that point, and you drop that outside rein then these horses panic and don't know what to do with themselves. I want to make sure they're comfortable with me dropping that outside rein and they can still hold themselves together and ride out correctly."

A) Start the spiral drill by loping a progressively smaller circle.

NOTE: Schulz is using her outside rein to keep the horse balanced, but it's looser and held higher as she prepares the horse to be eventually ridden one hand.

B) At the center of her spiral, Schulz melts into her saddle and brings her elbows back to collect into a sitting trot for a barrel sized circle.

C) The goal of Schulz's spiral drill is to develop suppleness and powerful forward motion while in collection. Note how her horse is still reaching and driving from behind because the rib cage and shoulder are elevated.

D) After trotting your barrel-sized circle, lope back out in progressively larger circles.

Jodi Goodrich & Heza Bug Leo Top Columbia River Circuit Finals Rodeo

By Tanya Randall

Jodi Goodrich of Stanfield, Oregon, and the great gelding Heza Bug Leo (“Bugs”) topped the Columbia River Circuit Finals, held October 2-3 in Hermiston, Oregon. The victory gave Goodrich $3,405 and the current No. 1 spot in the 2021 WPRA World Standings.

“We are just thankful they were able to get the Circuit Finals together,” said Goodrich, whose husband Brad is the calf roping director. “They’re usually in Yakima, Washington, but we couldn’t have it over there because of COVID. Hermiston, Oregon—the EOTEC (Eastern Oregon Trade and Events Center) really stepped up. That facility has been wonderful to work with. They welcomed having the circuit finals there.”

The Columbia River Circuit, composed of Washington, Oregon and the Idaho Panhandle, didn’t have a single rodeo for the WPRA in 2020 due to COVID. The Cascade Chute Out in Redmond, Oregon, in the middle of September counted for the 2021 season and the one other pro rodeo in Lakeside, Oregon, didn’t have WPRA barrels.

To address this issue, the Columbia River Circuit Finals was open to all 2020 cardholders in the circuit. Everyone made their first run in a progressive round with the top 30 advancing to two performances of 15.

Goodrich and Bugs were one of the 39 contestants making their first run in slack. They turned in the round-winning run of 17.24. They followed it up with a 17.35 in the performance to win the average.

Amber Moore and her tough gelding Blue Duck Down were second in the average, earning the right to go to the RAM National Circuit Finals Rodeo along with Goodrich. Emily McKinnies was third. Only 4/100ths of a second separated the three in the average.

“He can make mistakes and still clock and win,” said Goodrich of her very special equine partner. “My runs in Hermiston were not perfect and he still won. That’s one of the many things that’s so phenomenal about him. He’s just so dang fast.”

Bred by Sheila Moss, Bugs, 15, is the horse that made Shawne Bug Leo a household name in the barrel racing industry. Purchased for $800 out of the Heritage Place sale, the gelding out of County Line Liz, by Mister Te Jay, went on to be a futurity star for Latricia Duke. He was sold to Trip duPerier for his daughter 2015 WPRA World Champion Callie Apffel.

Although Apffel didn’t run the gelding, the duPerier-owned gelding qualified both Angie Meadors and Jana Bean to multiple NFRs. In 2016, he was sold to Goodrich.

“I had been looking for a horse, when Sherry Cervi called me and told me he was for sale,” recalled the lifelong rodeo competitor. “I was like, ‘Are you kidding me! I can come try him?’ It was meant to be that I owned him. I think I needed him and he needed me.”

Goodrich went to the Columbia River Circuit Finals on Bugs in the fall of 2016. She had drawn well at the winter building rodeos down south and was looking forward to making a run when Bugs injured himself in his pen. Although he was ready to go this spring, COVID actually worked in his favor.

“We’ve had a few injuries that we’ve had to deal with but we’re good to go now,” she said. “Actually with COVID, it gave us a little bit more time to get him 100 percent. He feels the best he ever has since I’ve had him.”

Goodrich spent much of the shutdown and summer hauling her children to high school rodeos.

“Our state association was pretty flexible so if we had a high school rodeo somewhere where they were really stringent with

TRAINING/CONDITIONING: “I really try to keep him in tip-top shape. He gets lots of long trotting. I try to do that for prevention of injuries. He doesn’t like to be ridden in the arena much. He loves going down to the alfalfa fields and being exercised down there. I try to do that at least four times a week.”

COVID, we were able to move it to another fairgrounds,” she said. “Both of my kids were able to go to Guthrie and compete at the Lazy E at the National High School Finals—my daughter in the barrels and my son in the tiedown. She’s a senior and he’s a freshman. It was her last year so it was neat to have them together.”

When Bugs returned to action this summer, he qualified Goodrich to another American Semifinals Rodeo with a win at the qualifier in Salina, Utah.

Now, she’s waiting to see what’s available.

“I’m trying to go to as many rodeos as I can but everything’s been cancelled,” she lamented. “I’m crossing my fingers that this win got me into Fort Worth on a qualification. I’m super pumped about that. We’ll go from there. I want to go to as many rodeos as I can get in this winter and go from there.”

Goodrich plans on making a trip to Texas in November for the Cardholder’s Race at the WPROA World Finals and she may possibly go to the WCRA’s Women’s Rodeo World Championships.

“I’d like to go as much as I can while he’s healthy and still at a good age,” she said. “My goal is to keep him as healthy as I can so he can have a long career from here on.”

Goodrich wanted to thank her family for their continuous support.

“My family is behind me 100 percent,” she said. “They’re always pushing me, especially my husband. He’s always pushing me out of my comfort zone and helps me with all the decisions. He’s the best. He’s always there for me.”

She’s also extremely grateful to have Bugs in her barn.

“I’m forever grateful that Sherry Cervi called me,” she said. “I get emotional thinking about it. I’ve trained horses and been to the circuit finals before so I know what it takes. For me to have him... I know he’s a once-in-a-lifetime horse. This horse is a dream come true.”

WCRA Joins Forces with WPRA and Cowgirl Gathering

WCRA (World Champions Rodeo Alliance), WPRA (Women's Professional Rodeo Association) and The Cowgirl Gathering today announced that they joined forces to coordinate their competition schedules. The unity of the three organizations will allow athletes to compete in the three events with the goal of limited schedule conflict.

"With these three events being on the same week, we are overjoyed that we could work together to erase all invisible barriers and do our best to reduce schedule conflict," said WCRA President

Bobby Mote. "It's important for us to work together with organizations that are good for cowgirls which in-turn is good for rodeo."

The blockbuster week of events (Women's Rodeo World Championship, WPRA World Finals, and The Cowgirl Gathering) will showcase one of the largest weekends in women's rodeo history and combined will pay a projected payout of more than $1.2 million.

According to WPRA CEO Doreen Wintermute; once the WPRA learned of the impending conflicts, the organization knew they needed to work together to maximize the opportunities presented to WPRA members.

American Paint Horse Association CMO Steven Hayes also stated that The Cowgirl Gathering is excited to be working with WCRA and WPRA to ensure all the cowgirls have an opportunity to run at this kind of this money during their inaugural year.

Payout and entry dates for each event is as follows:

Event, Total Payout, Entry Date

Women's Rodeo World Championship, $750,000, 7/27-10/25, enter at entrytool.com

WPRA World Finals, $250,000, 10/1-11/3, enter at www.wpra.com

The Cowgirl Gathering, $205,000, 10/27-11/3, enter at entrytool.com

The 2020 Wrangler® NFR is returning to its birthplace in Texas. The rodeo performances will happen at Globe Life Field in Arlington, December 3-12, while the surrounding NFR Experience will be anchored in Fort Worth.

"Fort Worth is proud to co-host the NFR Experience with our neighbor Arlington," said Fort Worth Mayor Betsy Price. "We can't wait to show off our Western Heritage. The legends of cowboys and cowgirls live here."

Presentation topics for the "Challenge of Change" convention will focus on the uncertainty ProRodeo endured and overcame throughout the 2020 season and the changes facing professional sports in the years ahead. As in prior years, the convention will feature an annual address from Taylor. The event also will include the PRCA Member Tradeshaw as well as several topical breakout sessions. Keynote speakers and details of the breakout sessions will be shared over the coming weeks.

The PRCA National Convention is the annual meeting of the organization's members on the achievements of the prior year and announcing new strategic areas of improvement. The evenings are highlighted with the fan favorite PRCA Welcome Reception set for December 1. The PRCA Annual Awards Banquet, where recognition is given for the extraordinary achievements of PRCA members, will be December 2. The Convention will close on December 3 with Rodeo Committee meetings and the Contract Personnel Council meetings. Convention attendees may register for the 2020 PRCA Convention by visiting www.prcaconvention.com.

The registration for the annual Contract Personnel Tradeshaw will open on Tuesday, October 6.

Someday isn't a real day like Monday or Tuesday;
it's just another word for 'Never'.

HEADIN' FOR HOME

by Sherry Morrison // Triple M (Mike Morrison Ministries)

Phil. 4:19 tells us "And my God shall supply all your need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Who supplies your need? God. Not your spouse, your friend, your job, your doctor, or anyone else. God.

ALL of us have challenges. They aren't all the same. You may have a hangnail that keeps you from playing a concert violin. Your best friend might have fallen off their elephant. I may have yelled at my dog the other night when he ran into the house (after discovering a skunk) and now I can't sing with my customary melodious voice! (I changed the circumstances to protect the innocent.) LOL!

We have problems? God IS the answer. We have questions? God IS the answer. But if we are constantly looking everywhere else, but to Him, we may just have those questions/problems for a long time. Why? Because we are looking in the wrong place.

I know a missionary to Mexico that is the loveliest person I have ever met. Love just oozes out of him and you just want to be close. He is over 90 now and he told a bunch of us young whippersnappers this. "Some people need a helping hand. Some people need a gentle shove. And some people need a sanctified kick in the butt!" Pick the one you are from the previous three and go after JESUS this week like your tail is on fire! If you do, by next week I doubt you'll have that problem anymore!

Mike and Sherry Morrison pastor "Church at the Barn" in Gillette, WY. They also travel to other areas ministering at barrel races, ranches, rodeos, churches and home Bible studies.
