Mental Toughness with Tammy Fischer & Sherry Cervi

By Tanya Randall

Sherry Cervi is sitting off in a corner thinking about the beach. Tammy Fischer is talking and staying so busy she almost missed her run.

Definitely not what most barrel racers would take for mental preparation strategies, but it's what works for them. Their strategies fit their personalities and took time to develop.

Mental toughness wasn't something either learned overnight. It's also something they continue to work on daily.

Tammy Fischer

Fischer may have won her first trophy at 2 years old—the Hard Luck Cowgirl, fell off between the first and second barrel, but got put back on her horse to finish her “run”—but the importance of mental toughness didn't come until much later.

“I always wanted to win,” said the multiple NFR qualifier, AQHA World Champion and BFA Futurity Champion. “Even in junior high, it wasn't, ‘Oh, I'm just doing this for fun.’ If you didn't win, it wasn't any fun. And that was anything. I don't care if it was pitching quarters or playing cards. I don't care what we're doing I want to win first.”

In college, she hit a mental roadblock—short rounds. “I could win the first round and then I run the fastest time in the short go but hit a barrel,” she recalled. “I decided I didn't want to be that person that they could count on to hit a barrel. I wanted to be the one they had to count on to beat. I had to learn how to do it.”

She said in college she got to watching and thinking too much. “When you're a kid, you just go,” she explained. “There's no fear, no thinking. In college, I got to watching and thinking it was easy. All you have to do is NOT hit a barrel, NOT run by a barrel, and NOT do this. All those nots get in your head. Sports psychology says your brain can't process negative words, so if you take NOT out of all those sentences, all you've focused on is hitting a barrel, going too wide instead of what you needed to do.”

She finally figured out what worked best for her was not to watch and keep her mind on other things by visiting with everyone.

“Even now, at the jackpot, I'll be back there talking to somebody, usually about barrel racing or their horse or whatever, and suddenly I look around and no one is going and it my turn!” she chuckled. “I wasn't even paying attention. I don't have my rubber bands on. My saddle wasn't tight. I never step off; I just reach down and tighten my saddle and put on my rubber bands as I'm walking to the alley. That horse will win the jackpot.”

Much to her hauling partners dismay, she also purposely shows up late, especially to the summer amateur rodeos where she knows exactly what time the barrels will run.

“The best and the worst thing that happens when you haul with me is I'm the worst at pulling up at 8:45 when the barrels run at 9,” she admitted. “My ideal rodeo is being there for 30 minutes and not any longer than that. You wouldn't believe how fast your nerves get wiped out that way because you don't have time to be nervous.”

You're worried about getting saddled and warmed up.”

Staying busy by either talking or hustling not to miss her run, keeps Fischer from overfocusing.

“You have to be in the zone to win, but I think there is a time when you can get so in the zone that you actually lose it. You're so focused you lose it all in the steps. I have to do this and I have to do that. You do so many steps that the run doesn't just flow and it's not natural.”

At the 2018 NFR, a lot of people noticed Fischer helping Taci Bettis in the alley with Bogie Is A Smash even though she was about to running a few riders later. The purpose was two-fold: to keep Bettis from locking down with hyper focus and give Fischer something to do so she wouldn't either. After all, if she was more focused on helping Bettis and running to her horse at the last minute, that was time she didn't overthink her job.

What she does at home is where she builds the foundation to be mental tough. She doesn't have to think because she's prepared at home.

“The alleyway is like a vacuum; it sucks your brain out,” she said. “You can't think as fast as your horse is running. You have to be able to just go and not think and let it go. When you try to think as fast as that horse is going that's when you mess up.”

“You can't get to a barrel race and prepare yourself to win. All that work is done at home. That's why I can talk my way up the alley because I already know what I need to do and I've prepared for it at home. I don't have to think about it because I know what need to do.”

Prepare at home doesn't mean runs at home though either—even for her young horses. It's spending time with a horse and working on doing the little things, like loping circles, perfectly.

“I don't ever go fast at home,” she said. “Even my babies don't get run at home. My dad preached and preached that horses are like a pack of cigarettes, they come with only so many runs in them. Every time you run at home, it's wasted. It's their home turf. You're not nervous. They're not nervous. They know what to do and everything's going to be perfect. You don't have that at a barrel race. When you get to a barrel race, everything's going to change. If you can't experience those nerves at home, why run at home?”

“Everything we did at home was perfect. If I was loping a circle, it was perfect circle. I practice being perfect. It didn't matter if you were going slow or fast, everything you did needed to be perfect and with a purpose.”

That perfection is something she learned from her dad Jack Dube.

“No one ever said you have to win first, but it was just understood if you practiced and you put that much time and effort into it you should win first,” she said. “I know with my dad, I could win first, but it was what were you doing at that second barrel, if you'd done this, this and this you would have been so much faster. It was always about the perfection of the game. It was never about first. If you work toward perfection of the game, winning comes with it. The better you make yourself the more you win first.”

“Everything we did at home was perfect.
If I was loping a circle, it was perfect circle.
I practice being perfect. It didn't matter if you were going slow or fast, everything you did needed to be perfect and with a purpose.”

Fischer said she reads a lot of sports psychology books—her favorite is Mind Gym: An Athletes Guide To Inner Excellence—and sport biographies and autobiographies, like Michael Phelps' No Limits: The Will To Succeed.

The Mind Gym says a lot about how the mind handles negatives—negative words, negative situations. A lot of barrel racers don't realize that they preprogram themselves to fail, but not only using negatives, but also focusing on negative actions. Watching your bad runs can actually do more harm than good if you over do it.

"If you have a bad run, watch it one time and throw it away. Delete. You're done. It's the same thing with the negative words, if you watch that run over and over, even if you're trying to see what you did wrong, the more watch it, your mind is recording it over and over again. Even though you're trying to think I'm not going to do that, your mind has recorded it and you're going to make that same mistake over again," she said.

Fischer suggests keeping videos of good runs with you to re-enforce positive experiences.

"I don't care if you have to go back three runs or three years, whatever it takes, to find a good run and watch it. Know that you have that good run so you can record it in your memory. Put one good run on your phone, when you get really nervous or before you saddle your horse watch that run. Let that be your memory and don't think about that last run. It puts the focus on what you're going to do not what you don't want to do.

"I've got Roundpen's run from Calgary and from when I won Houston. Calgary is from 09 and the Houston run in 06. They're probably my two most favorite runs. They're on my phone so if I get to where the nerves are overwhelming me or I'm just feeling a lot of pressure, those are the two runs that I watch. I haven't run Roundpen since 2017 and it's not even the same horse, same feel or same anything, but those two runs, I felt like a rock star. So, if the world feels like it's caving in on me those are the two runs I'm going to watch. I do know how to do this. I can even be the one that wins. "You have to know that you can win. If you don't think you can win, no one else is going to either. You've got to decide when you go down the alley you're going to win."

Sherry Cervi

Like Fischer, Cervi started competing young, but didn't appreciate the mental game until she was older. She's also a fan of the Mind Gym. Yet, while Fischer is staying on her mental game with strategic distractions, Cervi is often off to herself in quiet reflection.

"The mental part intrigues me," she said, "and the more I compete the more I try to work on my mental game. I read some books, but it wasn't until later on in my career I started really trying to be aware of it and controlling where my mind went.

"I wish knew what I know now when I first started rodeoing professionally. I had great horses and I was young. I look back and think if I would have been more mentally tough and more prepared I would have handle situations better than I did.

"I'd look back and think why did I let myself get in this situation? I literally was not mentally prepared for it. I didn't make the Finals for a couple of years, and when I got Stingray, I told myself If I'm ever in a situation, like say coming down to the 10th round and you got to get around the barrels to win the average—some high pressure situation—I was not going to let the mental game make me lose. I was going to be as mentally prepared as I could."

"...Choosing your traveling partner and your friends wisely is the most important thing you can do for you mental game."

her house as an adult. And, she's always sharing positive quotes on social media.

She also tries to surround herself with positive people.

"I have positive people in my life," she said. "When it comes to traveling together, choose wisely. I've gone with groups before and when one of you is winning and the other is struggling, that's the hardest. You can't be too happy because your friend is struggling. Choosing your traveling partner and your friends wisely is the most important thing you can do for you mental game."

While she likes to visit with friends at events, she tries to avoid negative conversations.

"I don't want to be antisocial, but if a conversation is turning negative, I'll leave," she admitted. "I don't want to be caught up in it. You want to be social and have fun with friends but you have to remember why you are out there. Don't get caught up in the negativity. Be the positive one and change the subject. If someone wants to say something negative about their run, find something positive to say and change it up."

Another way she chooses to stay positive is focusing her energy on things that she can control.

"Worry about the things that you can control like taking care of your horse," she said. "I think people worry about too many of the things they can't control like the atmosphere of the rodeo or ground conditions. They can control how they take care of their horse and how they prepare. Focusing more on the things you can't control is wasted energy."

She also can redirect negative thoughts by having someone to call and talk things through.

"They don't have to have the right answer, but you want to be able to vent to them," she said. "You just want to be able to talk it out. Sometimes I'll say what I'm doing out loud and realize it's not

"Worry about the things that you can control like taking care of your horse," that bad and I can move on.”

Cervi also likes to mentally prepare herself by running scenarios through her mind.

“Before I ever made the Finals, I would run 10 rounds in my mind,” she said. “I wanted to be there so badly. What would it be like to run down the alleyway in the Thomas & Mack? I’d play the runs in my mind on whatever horse I was at the time.”

By mentally preparing for high pressure situations, she can control her nervousness and not let it change her game. A perfect example is ropers in the practice pen.

“You hear that all the time with roping with kids and adults,” she said. “You hear it in the practice pen—this is for $100,000 or this is for a truck. When you do back in the box for something like that you shouldn’t do anything different. I think that’s the key. You control the nervousness and don’t let that high pressure situation change what you would do.”

She employed a similar strategy while hauling MP Ray Of Fame (“Money May”) to prepare her for the 2019 BFA Futurity.

“That’s out of my comfort zone and I get more nervous for that than I do at the rodeos,” she admitted. “I knew it going to be her first time competing (at the BFA), I was going to be nervous and I wanted her to look good. I wanted to be prepared as I could, so I’d pretend that I was at my first competition. I’d plan a scenario out in my head when I’d make a run during the summer.”

At events, Cervi likes to stay off by herself before she runs. “Someone will come up to talk to me and they’re like ‘Oh I don’t mean to bother you.’ It’s not that I can’t talk and I think talking ruins my mental focus. It’s not like that at all. It’s just my personality that I like to stay to myself and get ready,” she said. “Before I go in, I’ll tell myself a couple things I need to do on that specific horse, but I try to keep it simple.”

To avoid over thinking in high pressure situations, she says she’ll take her thoughts out of the situation.

If my mind gets to running too much on the situation, I take myself away,” she explained. “I think about being on the beach, or something like that, because that’s how I get my mind back in control. Then it’s back to keeping it simple. Ride your horse all the way to the barrel. Do a few things. I tell myself all the time, ‘Mind in the middle.’

“Overthinking can be worse than not thinking about it at all. You get to thinking about too many things and you over ride your horse instead of riding with feel. I can prepare for run and have it in my mind that I’m going to do this, but the horse may trip or grounds a little hard...you have to ride with feel and you have to react to what happens in that run at that moment.”

Michael Duffie & Reclaim Fame Dominate at Good Times Makin Memories Race

By Tanya Randall

Southeast barrel racers were back in full force at Good Times Makin Memories Barrel Race, held May 8-9 at the Double J Arena in Pendleton, South Carolina. Michael Duffie of Williamston, South Carolina, and his NBHA Youth 1D Champion Reclaim Fame (“Famous”) collected $2,521 on the weekend for their two runs.

“It really does pay good,” Duffie said of the Good Times races. The event drew 369 entries for the $1000-added Open on Saturday. “I don’t think they were expecting it to be that big. I was happy to get to go.”

Duffie, who will turn 18 this Friday, said he hasn’t been to jackpot since early in March, shortly after the NBHA Dixie Nationals in North Augusta.

“Here recently I’ve just been trying to keep my open horses legged up,” he said. “I haven’t really been riding a lot. I’ve been trying to keep them fat and happy. I try not to work them too much. I’ll ride them every now and then but I don’t hop on them every day. I like to just work them in the roundpen or do some ground work with them.”

Duffie has also been using the “down time” to give lessons and work on setting up his horse business for the future.

“During this time, too, I’ve been trying to give some lessons,” he said. “I enjoy working with the young kids. I look up to a bunch of people and when I go up to them to ask for advice I like when they treat me like a friend and I try to do the same when people ask advice from me. Here lately, I’m trying to move some open horses before I start bringing in some younger ones because I don’t have the room.”

One of the ones that won’t be moved is his longtime equine partner Famous. Bred by Nancy Mullenbach, Famous, 15, is by Dash Ta Fame out of Alicia Rene, by Real Ease. He is a full brother to Sue Smith’s NFR horse Real Claim To Fame.

Mike Green first paired the two together five years ago, prior to their NBHA Youth 1D World Championship. After the championship, Famous sold to Canadian Edwin Cameron, but two years ago, Duffie was able to get him back.

“I try not to get too attached to my horses, but he’s got a special place in my heart,” Duffie said. “Me and that horse have been through a lot. At one point, I thought I’d never get to see him again. I never really thought he’d be at my house. Every time I got to the barn I look at him, I see him as a blessing.”

“He’s one-of-a-kind. He’s got the best personality. Every day you walk up to him, he’s got his tongue sticking out. When you ride him, he’s got his tongue sticking out and he flips his head around. He acts like a stud. He prances around when other horses are around. He’s really fun to be around.”

At Pendleton, Duffie and Famous were second in the warmup race and the members only sidepot on Friday with a 15.055, before sweeping every class they entered on Saturday—the $1,000-added open, the members only sidepot, the 2D 100% payback slot race and $300-added youth—with a 14.756.

“The first day I went I took Reclaim Fame and A Little Corona Plz,” he said. “Famous ran a 15.0 and I just let him cruise. I didn’t get him woke up or nothing before we went in. He always gets a little faster and stronger with each run he makes. He made a smooth pass the first day, but he wasn’t running quite as hard as he did on Saturday.”

THE RUNDOWN w/Michael Duffie

Reclaim Fame “Famous” 16 hands, “He’s a monster.”

BIT: Ring bit or Loomis with a smooth mouthpiece. At Pendleton, he ran in the ring bit on Friday and Loomis on Saturday.

HEADGEAR: “He can get his head out there to do his own thing. The only reason I keep it on him is because sometimes when he gets too excited and throws his head, and I don’t want him hitting me or someone else with it.”

SADDLE: Mike Green

SADDLE PAD: Impact Gel

LEG GEAR: Brand X on front — “They’re my all-time favorites. They’re the easiest boots to take off and put on your horse. When you’re running in mud, they don’t seem to get as wet and full of dirt as the other boots.”

SHOEING: Aluminum

FEED: Nutrena Pro Force Fuel

HAY: Alfalfa

SUPPLEMENTS: BioMane

ALTERNATIVE THERAPIES: MagnaWave “I use MagnaWave at just about every show I go to. I love it.”

TRAINING/CONDITIONING: “I work him in the roundpen or ride him in the pasture. I rarely take him through the barrel pattern. He likes to see the barrels, but he wants to see them at the show, not at home.”

SPONSORS: Fmpact Gel, Brand X, Spur Life, Oxy-Gen, New Holland-Old Stone Tractor

Two World Championships in Two Separate Events in 1962 Achieved by a Horse Named Red

First appeared in WPRA News; By Jolee Lautaret

Star Plaudit holds a very unique record in the world of professional rodeo, one that is not likely to ever be duplicated. The bay gelding won two World Championships in the sport in a single year and contributed to a third. Red, as he was affectionately known, carried his owner Sherry Johnson to the GRA world title in the barrel racing and close family friend Tom Nesmith to the RCA world title in the steer wrestling and helped the Oklahoman also claim the RCA All Around championship, all in 1962.

"He was one of those once in a lifetime horses," said Johnson.

While this is often said by those ladies who have won the WPRA world championship, when Johnson says it, it carries a bit more weight.

After all, Johnson has trained six horses that have made an appearance at the NFR. She is a 12-time National Finals Rodeo qualifier, the first coming in 1959 at the first GRA Finals and the last in 1991 under the bright lights of Las Vegas, a span of four decades. She was named the WPRA's Coca Cola Woman of the Year in 1997 and in 2005 she was inducted into the National Cowboy and Western Heritage Museum's Rodeo Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City.

Johnson first came to know Red when her husband at the time, Benny Combs bought the horse in partnership with his brother Willard. Red was a bulldogging horse and the brothers competed on him for a time before Benny and Sherry bought Willard out. Red was eight at the time and Johnson was in need of a horse to run barrels.

"I was afoot," Johnson remembers. "We brought him home in the fall and I put six weeks of barrel training on him and took him to Denver." Barrel racing seemed to come easy to the gelding and the pair placed second or better each round at the Stock Show until a tipped barrel in the short go cost them the championship.

"He was just one of those runaway freaks," Johnson says of her horse's style and quick understanding of the barrels. "It was one wild ride."

Johnson credits the steer wrestling with teaching Red how to run hard through the pattern. Mistakes like going by the first barrel did not cost the horse time in his run like it might other horses.

"He ran as hard as he could," Johnson says, "and never was bad to slip or stumble."

Red was very independent according to Johnson, strictly business and not at all interested in attention from people.

"He tolerated me, I could brush him all day long and he liked that," Johnson says, "but he didn't like hugs or being petted."

In fact, Johnson was the only human that Red seemed to like. No one else could catch the gelding when he was out in the pasture; Benny used to just send Johnson, saying "you go get him." Johnson remembers a time during the Fort Worth rodeo when she sent her sister Florence (Youree) out to the rodeo grounds to feed Red.

"He booted her out of the stall," she says. Luckily, she wasn't hurt but definitely got the message. As for Johnson, she says she could have crawled between his legs and he wouldn't do a thing.

Red was good inside and out – "he didn't like Sidney, Iowa, but we could place, and Burwell" – but everything else was OK with the tough gelding.

Red won almost all of the big rodeos at the time with the notable exception of Denver, where something weird always seemed to happen. One year, Johnson remembers losing her reins at the second barrel. They flipped over Red's head and were dangling from an ear, swinging near the ground, dangerously.

"I just thought, 'I'm dead,'" Johnson laughs. The pair somehow finished the run and won second in the go round. "It wasn't as dramatic as Charmayne's run at the finals but I guess Red was pretty automatic."

"We won Houston one year and won $650," she laughs, "if that tells you how much times have changed."

He spent his earliest years competing in both the barrels and steer wrestling at most of the rodeos.

"We would always ask that I be put to the bottom of the ground," Johnson remembers. "The bulldogging was usually right before the barrels so if I was last, it gave Red a chance to catch his breath. I'm not sure they would let you do that now," she adds, laughing.

Johnson recalls making the short round at Cheyenne one year.

"They put the barrels between the sections of bulldogging. The barrels ran from the opposite end. So, they ran steers on him in the first section and then I loped him to the other end to run barrels," Johnson shakes her head. "Obviously, he was out of air and didn't do as good as we hoped. After his run, we loped back down to the bulldogging end and Jim Painter won second in the average on him."

Johnson said they didn't limit the steer wrestling runs because Red made so much money, especially at the big rodeos. Johnson remembers getting a $1,000 bill from a steer wrestler in Denver after he won big aboard Red.

Despite running at a disadvantage everywhere, Johnson and Red were able to make the GRA Finals in Scottsdale, Ariz., in 1960 and again at Santa Maria, Calif., in 1961. That year, Johnson won the GRA All-Around World Championship. Red was her mount for the barrels and her mare that she had run at the first GRA Finals in Clayton, N.M., in 1959 was her ride for the roping and flag race.

In 1962 Johnson and Benny, who was already a RCA world champion having won the steer wrestling title in 1955, decided that the time was right for Johnson to make a run at the world title in the barrels. They hit the trail hard. Johnson again qualified for the GRA Finals, that year to be held in Dallas, Texas. Red was 12.

Johnson recalls that Red was rarely in need of correcting but if he ever did make a mistake, the horse would pretty much correct himself. At the Finals in 1962, Red made one of his few mistakes.

"On the first barrel, he turned right back through himself, and ended up on the same side," Johnson remembers. "Needless to say we didn't place in the average."

In typical fashion, Red came back and won some go round money to finish out the Finals. Her year-end total was enough to take the world title by about $800 over Wanda Bush. They won $7,899 for the year.

Meanwhile, several guys rode Red to the RCA's National Finals Rodeo, including Nesmith. He won $17,000 en route to his title.

"We never tried for a world title again," Johnson says. But she rode Red to five more Finals qualifications, including the first year that the GRA was included with the NFR at Oklahoma City in 1967.

"I just thought that was the biggest deal in the world, another of my goals accomplished," Johnson states. "Growing up we used to go to the rodeo at Fort Worth. As a kid, all I wanted was to one day get to ride in the grand entry," Johnson remembers. "Then the first year I ran barrels there . . . there was no greater thrill than running down that long alley to the first barrel – it was a blind alley like so many others back then – knowing that your horse was going to turn."

When Johnson and Combs divorced, Red became strictly a barrel racing horse. He was retired at age 18.

"He was still sound and I didn't want to cripple him," Johnson says. Her young daughter Becky rode the horse some in his retirement. "She kinda balanced on the reins and didn't hit as many barrels as I did!"

After several years in her pasture, Johnson sent Red to a family friend whose young daughter rode the horse. They kept him in the front yard.

"I loved being able to look out the kitchen window and see how the day was going for him," Johnson says. Sending Red away was a tough decision and she asked the new owners not to tell her when the aging horse passed away.

"Of course, I cried when they finally told me," she admits. "You know, I think a barrel racer gets to know her horse almost better than her husband. You know their feelings so well."

No horse in the history of professional rodeo can lay claim to the accomplishments that Red achieved. Two World Championships in two separate events in the same year. Not to mention a hand in two all-around titles in both the GRA and RCA.

"He was just awesome." Johnson knows better than anyone.

Lefts and Rights with Kim Schulze

By Kim Schulze with Bonnie Wheatley

One thing I've been doing a lot of with my horses lately is lefts and rights, mainly using four barrels set in a diamond shape. I know a lot of people do lefts and rights, but I'd never really done it a lot until more recently. I'm doing this exercise more lately, but what I've found is that tailoring it to whichever horse I'm riding works best. I ride so much by feel that it's hard to explain, but it seems like I'm achieving two different things even though it's technically the same drill with each of the two horses I have right now. It's important to think about what each horse needs because they have different strides and their own unique styles. With that said, I want both horses to keep forward motion and stay in 4-wheel-drive through the turns with collection so I always keep those goals in mind. It's a great way to slow work my horses to help keep them relaxed too. Lefts and rights are definitely not all I do when I work my horses. I modify what I do according to what I'm feeling. A lot of times I work the pattern, stopping at every barrel and asking them to move their feet quick through the turn. I always want to be able to lope them around a barrel on a loose rein and not have them falling into the circle or leaning on me. Whatever I feel like they need, that's what I'll do. But, I do think these lefts and rights and how I vary the drill for each of my two horses is very beneficial and it's interesting to contrast the two side by side to show the rate points that work best for each horse.

Horse 1

With my horse "Elsie" I really sit and ask her to shorten her stride, be collected but stay in forward motion as I work her through lefts and rights. I really want to set her at my rate point, which for her is up into the hole, but at that point I want her to shorten her stride, slow down and rate to prepare for the turn. She needs encouraged to gather her stride so she's not strung out because she runs extremely hard. This mare has had some high pressure runs and was getting a little strung out, so I've been concentrating on reinforcing rate and really getting back to the basics.

Horse 2

My other horse "JJ," he has more of a style where he wants to rate hard and come back straight or he might start the turn a little too soon, so my position is a bit more forward with him. I want JJ to keep a bit more forward motion—still with the rate and shortening his stride—but in a slightly different spot.

How far along in training does my horse have to be for this type of pattern work?

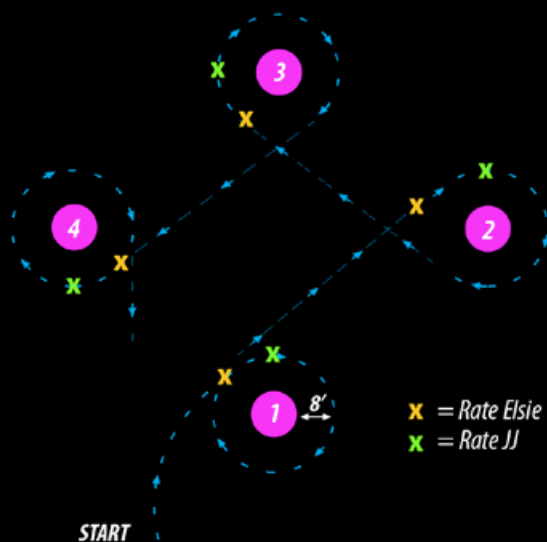

They need to be pretty broke; I want my horses broke before I do much of anything related to the pattern. They need to stop, back up, turn around, counter arc, work off my rein and my leg, and of course be able to lope collected circles. They need to be light with whatever I ask them to do.

Preferred headgear for this drill?

I use several different bits and I'm not one to use the same bit on a horse every time I ride. I'll use more of a leverage bit if a horse is getting strong and I need to back it off and get more rate. If I don't need as much I'll use the Ed Wright long shank gag on JJ quite a bit, or a rope draw gag. Lately I've been running him in the Kerry Kelley Mini-Hemi bit. Occasionally I'll work them in that bit, but I don't normally work my horses in the same bit I'm running them in. I don't handle my horses a lot in a run so as long as I have enough bit to where they're not leaning on me, that's what I use.

Lefts & Rights with Kim Schulze

- Step 1) Set up the cloverleaf pattern as you normally would but add a fourth barrel to create a diamond. In essence you have two barrel patterns in your diamond.
- Step 2) Pick a barrel to start from and lope around that first barrel to the right.
- Step 3) Continue on to the next barrel and so on and so forth, loping a complete circle or two around each barrel through the diamond, paying particular attention to the points where you ask your horse to rate down and shorten the stride.
- Step 4) Reverse and lope all lefts in the same manner.

Barrel Racer Bio: Kim Schulze

Kim Schulze is a seven-time Mountain States Circuit Finals Rodeo qualifier and two-time circuit champion. She earned the barrel racing championship of the 2011 Cheyenne Frontier Days Rodeo, which was the same year she finished her season as the Mountain States Circuit Champion barrel racer. Kim was the 2013 Canadian Pro Rodeo Association reserve champion barrel racer and is a past Ram National Circuit Finals qualifier. She finished 16th in the 2013 WPR World Standings and her horse Vegaspeed, "Speedy," was voted the Mountain States Circuit Barrel Horse of the Year on two separate occasions.

Kim and her husband Shayne split their time between their home in Larkspur, Colorado, and Texas. They have two grown sons, Cade and Kai, and two grandchildren, Kymbre and Kannyn. For more information on Kim, you can visit her professional page on Facebook.

PRCA's Digital Rodeo Tournament

Sage Kimzey has won six consecutive PRCA bull riding titles. In the Digital Rodeo Tournament presented by The Cowboy Channel, the No. 1 seed in bull riding is on to the quarterfinals with ease.

Kimzey cruised into the second round with 63% of the vote and will face No. 9 Ruger Piva in the quarterfinals. Piva got the upset win by garnering 65%.

Piva wasn't the only upset winner. He was joined by No. 15 Tyler Bingham, No. 12 Parker McCown and No. 13 Brody Yeary, who nipped No. 4 Boudreaux Campbell by a mere 207 votes (50.91% to 49.09%) in the closest race in the bull riding.

Barrel racing top seed Brittany Pozzi Tonozzi earned votes like a top seed should, cruising into the quarterfinals with 72%.

Pozzi Tonozzi was one of the few favorites to advance in the barrel racing. No. 2 Jimmie Smith joined her, but the Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 seeds all fell. No. 3 Hailey Lockwood, the reigning two-time champion, was edged by No. 14 Brittany Barnett 51.7% to 48.2%.

In the closest race, No. 11 Wenda Johnson defeated No. 6 Tillar Murray by 57 votes.

Up next, bareback riding and steer wrestling return with the quarterfinalists. Vote at prorodeo.com. Voting ends at 5 p.m. (ET) May 14.

SOME GOOD STUFF...

Being part of the horse world or the western world as a whole is amazing but also presents many challenges, so I thought it would be fun to just share "Some Good Stuff" each week with you all. Some weeks it will be something we found & some weeks it may be some thoughts I came across during the week.

This week across my Facebook feed came a graphic from Zig Ziglar; it said, "Be Positive, Patient, and Persistent." With all the things going on in the world that statement kind of sums up how we need to be doesn't it?

In the western world and agriculture as a whole we are used to just digging in and working harder when challenges come, but with this virus and all that came with it a we were all forced into being patient for a while. This is a tough one for me; I have a hard time just sticking with it while my electric toothbrush goes through it's 2 minute cycle! Seems to be more like an hour! Patience is not my long suit.

Then I thought more about our situation and thought how many times with a horse do we really just need to be positive, patient, and persistent? We don't need to change anything we just need to stay the course and let that horse come to it on their own time. Maybe it's a week, month or a year down the road.

Thinking about this patience with horses I thought back to the unbelievable Thoroughbred mare Zenyatta, who raced just about 10 years ago. While most thoroughbreds make their first starts at 2 and run for most of their money in the spring of their 3 yr old years; Zenyatta didn't even have a race until late November her 3 yr old year. Zenyatta went on to win her first 19 races and ended her career with a head bob loss in the Breeders Cup Classic after flying across the country.

She won every Top race for mares in the country and the Breeders Cup Classic, earning $7.3 million along the way. Her trainer, John Shirreffs stayed positive, patient, and persistent about Zenyatta and she paid back big dividends. This doesn't mean we need to miss a futurity year or something, but how often would it pay us back ten fold if we were just patient with a horse or for that matter ourselves for a few weeks or a month?

Staying positive with your patience & persistence changes our view of everything that comes across our path. It takes a period of time where we can't travel and reframes it into a break to refresh, get all those projects done at home, spend quality time with your kids, get the colts more broke and ready. It makes the day to day tasks of the horse business and life a fun challenge instead of a grind. Plus these high desire, sensitive, talented horses we are all lucky enough to ride can dang sure tell when you like them and when you don't, so we have to project that positivity to them. Another

Zig Ziglar quote kind of sums it up. "Positive thinking will let you do everything better than negative thinking will."

Finally, it is so important to stay Persistent while we are positive and patient. A quick Google search shows Persistent defined as "continuing firmly or obstinately in a course of action in spite of difficulty or opposition." We must keep doing all we can do everyday so when our opportunities come up we are ready. We can't sit on the couch watching the news or reading Facebook and hope our horses or lives have gotten better. We just have to keep going & doing our best through the next day... then the next week... then the next month as we get closer and closer to where we are headed. If we just keep going we will figure everything else out along the way.

Positive, Patient, Persistent... think of Mary Burger winning the world in her 50s then coming back to be the oldest World Champion at age 68... think of June Holeman qualifying to the NFR at age 62 driving her ambulance from rodeo to rodeo... If we are all Positive, Patient, and Persistent we will all get through this and be better for it!

Thanks for reading... Tracy W. Swan

Quick Note... Over the last 13 years, Dusti and I have really enjoyed the privilege of bringing you the results and stories from everything barrel racing. Let me introduce you all. My wife and I have interchangeable names, my name is Tracy and my wife's name is Dusti and we long ago gave up trying to correct people when they assume we are a ma'am or sir incorrectly (LOL).

We have two wonderful kids and they keep us busy heading to youth rodeos and school sports. Dusti does all the graphic work, results, and building the actual Report & I like to think of myself as her Executive Assistant!

We would also like to express our gratitude to so many people over the years who have helped us get this out every week since March 2007. We appreciate all the barrel racers who have so kindly taken time out of their day to share their stories with us; the barrel producers who took time to send us results and information; advertisers who believed in what we were doing; the writers who have worked so hard for us over the years getting great stories together on a short deadline; and finally to all our family and friends who have helped us however they could along our way.

We have so many people to be grateful for in our lives and we have met so many neat people along our adventure. Thank you all.

HEADIN' FOR HOME

Finally! A barrel race!! What does a barrel race look like after 2 months? CHAOS! And we were ALL there! Three days and two nights (late, late, late nights) of barrel racing!

Some girls got bucked off. Some fell off. Some horses in their excitement just fell down! It was very interesting! LOL! There were horses that were slicked off and fit. There were horses that still had tons of winter hair and fat.

We actually got to go into a few restaurants and I would have to say the same thing was evident there. Some were clean and the servers happy. Others looked like a bomb had gone off and the workers were defeated acting.

2 Tim. 4:2 tells us to be ready, in season and out! We can get a lot done in two months. Yes, adjustments had to be made, for all of us. Was/is it fun? Nope. But if we stay connected to God, we will be the victorious ones! Beats the alternative doesn't it? Blessings on all of you!
