Vauna Walker & CBC Speeding Goodbye Take PCR Pink Cadillac Futurity Championship

By Tanya Randall

Multiple futurity champion Vauna Walker of Pingree, Idaho, and her 4-year-old gelding CBC Speeding Goodbye ("Ace") took home a $2,228 championship from the $3,000-added Pink Cadillac Futurity, held May 15-17 with the Southwest Desert Classic Open at the Blackhawk Arena in Salina, Utah.

"It was great to go this weekend," said Walker. "They had a great turnout. It was big. A lot of people really want to run barrels again. They did a great job putting it on. It was bigger than what they're used to and with all the challenges of maintaining space, I thought they did really well. I'm deeply appreciative of all the work they had to put into it. I was delighted to be able to go!"

The race for the championship couldn't have been any tighter. Walker and Ace finished 1/1,000th of a second ahead of reserve champions Jordan Bailey and her On A Gator, Judge Cash 5-year-old Ima Boy Gator.

Walker took first and second in the first round of the futurity.

"It was just really exciting," she said. "I'm sure most of the futurity trainers felt the same way. You feel like your horses are working good and you're doing your usual of keeping them in condition, but after that long without running, you're kind of hoping they remember! That was a great surprise."

Her round winner was Goodbye Lane Seis ("Marley"), a 4-year-old gelding by The Goodbye Lane out of the Tres Seis mare Lady Tres Seis. They had the fastest time of the futurity a 15.551.

"He worked really well both times," said Walker. "In the second round, he slipped and caught a barrel. It happens sometimes."

Marley, who is owned by the Walkers, came from his breeder Jim Morley of Hughes-Morley Land and Livestock. The Walkers purchased the gelding as a 2-year-old out of the Copper Spring Ranch Sale.

"We had gone and looked at him when he was in Utah," said Walker. "We went up there (to the sale) and ended up buying him. He's got a delightful personality. I'm so glad we got him. He's so loving and willing. He's got all kinds of speed. We went really, really slow with him because he does have all kinds of fly-by speed. At least at this futurity, he felt really solid. He just ran in there and got in position."

Her champion, Ace, was a later purchase by her mother-in-law and longtime horse partner Ruby Walker.

"He came from Mary Jo Carlson of Utah," said Walker. "She also runs barrels and she had a lot of colts for this year. My mother-in-law had another futurity horse but he didn't work out so she was looking for one. We didn't get this horse bought until late June of last year."

"He's been a really nice horse. He'd hadn't been really started on the barrels, but he'd been ridden a lot. Mary Jo had put a lot of time into him. He was broke and he'd done a lot of stuff, like move cows. He came to us with a really nice open mind. He came along faster than I would have expected. He's so fast and quick on the turns."

Ace, another 4-year-old gelding by The Goodbye Lane, is out of Claude B Crozier's Mitbeastreaker, Dash Ta Fame mare Speeding Streaker. He was second in his first run and was two holes of the money in the second round.

SHOEING: Rims on front, regular on back

HAY: Alfalfa hay

SUPPLEMENTS: Ichon injectable for joints, monthly

ALTERNATIVE THERAPIES: Back On Track products

TRAINING/CONDITIONING: "Both of those Goodbye Lanes have really good retention on the pattern so we try to get them out. They may be get slow work in between barrel races and we try to get them out in more of a trail ride situation twice a week. They get to chase the steers back to striping chute and stuff like that. It just keeps their mind right."

SPONSORS: Best Fit Horse Care, Mike & Cindy Holland

"His first run, he felt like he was going a little fast and scrambled in a couple of places," said Walker of his 15.768. "He just keeps running. He can have something happen but he's going to keep pushing. It felt almost a little bit wild. His second run felt cleaner and more solid—more grown up. It was really fun with him."

"I initially noticed when I first started to lope him through the barrels that he wanted to do a snap back turn instead of moving his feet all the way through. We worked through that and it's so hard to explain how quick he feels through his turns. You're going into the barrel and the next thing you know you're headed out in the other direction. It's a lot of fun."

A bigger highlight than winning the futurity—and actually getting to sit down and eat Mexican food in a restaurant, which Walker stated, "It was the best food I ever tasted because they brought it to me!"—was having her oldest daughter, Anita Ellis, take third in the second round of the futurity on their homebred RV Two Dash Ta Vegas. Ellis trained the mare herself—with her mom watching on, of course, and picked up $872 for their 15.658.

"We were just ecstatic that they all went down there and worked," said Walker, who had been to the two Arizona futurities and the C-N in California before the COVID outbreak. "That's as good as you can ask for with these babies. It was so gratifying to take them and have them all really try to work. I don't expect perfection at this point in the game. It was just so uncertain with all that time in between. You just feel like kissing them when they go out there and try to work like that!"

Both Walker and her husband Randy retired from the nursing profession. She said it's been wonderful for the both of them.

"It's been so nice to be on a not so tight schedule," she said. "It's just been so fun to train horses. He team ropes and I take my horses and go ride around to get them used to stuff. It's really cool working together. It's something that I take for granted sometimes but I appreciate it so much. This weekend brought it home again so much. He knows these colts as well as I do. He helps me warm them up. He helps me get them ready. It's really a fun time in life. It's really better than I ever expected retirement to be!"

Randee Prindle and Red Man Jones Dominate Missouri Classic

Q&A with Randee Prindle

BRR: Can you walk us through your runs at the Missouri Classic?

Prindle: Friday night he went in and had one of the smoothest runs he's had ever. I just let him roll thru (he was extra full of himself! LOL) All 3 barrels were nice and tight and the ground held him really well. Saturday night we went rolling into first a little too hard and stepped past it but made up some time with a nice second and third barrel and on Sunday our main goal was just to keep it clean and he went in and had a nice first and second then had to have him step off third because he was trying to start his turn a little too soon so ended up stepping off of it a little.

BRR: What makes Red Man Jones so special and makes him clock such fast times?

Prindle: He is just kind of a freak and if anyone ever seen me warm him up you'd say he is like half broke (LOL)! His style allows him not have have to rate a lot in his turns which is good but if the ground isn't the best it doesn't hold him because of it and there's been a couple times we about went down.

BRR: How do you typically prepare for your runs on him mentally and warm up wise?

Prindle: Typically he gets his PEMF treatment and his spectra laser blanket on him before his run and then I stretch him out before getting on. He gets warmed up 15 horses before his run. Mentally I just don't think about my run. I look at it this way if I ride him right he'll work right or at least I hope he does.

BRR: What have you been doing with your horses and yourself during the past few months?

Prindle: The past months I've been riding clients horses and working with a couple of my young horses to get going while my two running horses got a break.

More Perspectives In Mental Toughness, Part II

By Tanya Randall

Emily Miller

Emily Miller doesn't make her living as a professional barrel racer. The 2019 NFR qualifier is a dental hygienist and does her best to work Mondays through Thursdays at Stephens Family Dental in Weatherford, Oklahoma, when she's not rodeoing.

Having that job helps her mentally in the arena.

"If I have to start relying on my horses for an income, or I HAVE to win a check here to pay the bills, I don't feel like I'm the same competitor," she said. "I start prioritizing things a little more than I should."

"When I'm out there running barrels because I love it and I know my horse is capable of winning and I want to give him the best opportunity with the security net of he is not the one putting food on the table at night I am able to do that better. That's just for me and every one's different. I like being able to go back to work and know that my truck payment gets made because of that. It's not up to Chongo to do that."

Miller started competing when she was 8. Her parents, who weren't involved in horses, immediately noticed both the cost of the sport and her commitment to it.

"I was having fun and having a good time, but they could see I wasn't working as hard at it as I should," she explained. "I was just there because my friends were. Mom and Dad opened up a checking account for me and said, 'You can pay your own entry fees, and if you don't win enough to pay your own entries, you can stay home until you've saved up your allowance to pay for the next one.'"

"They gave me the responsibility right off the bat. It is an expensive sport and you need to be able to cover your expenses. It gets expensive really quickly. Dad always told me, this is your hobby, this is what you love to do, but you need something to fall back on. Something that's reliable and consistent. If your horse is hurt and you're out six months, it doesn't put you out. They were really big on me getting an education."

Job security has also made decisions like turning out due to poor ground conditions easier.

"Having that security allows me to have a little more flexibility in that decision-making process," she said.

Outside of having the comfort of her job, Miller's mental game is about the same as any other rodeo athlete. Keeping things simple and focusing on the little things.

"I have a really busy mind and it constantly going," she admitted. "I can be sitting there talking and thinking about 12 other things, so I try to calm my brain down. I pray before, I try to ask for a safe, clean run, and I tell myself, sit up and look at your spots. It helps me to keep in mind what my job is. I just try to dial in on a couple of little instructions."

Vocalization is Miller's preferred method, so she's always talking through what she needs to do, especially in the alley.

"I was a little self-conscious about people seeing me talking to myself at the NFR," she chuckled, "but when I actually watched the replay, you couldn't tell. I'm big on verbalization. Jana (Turner) would say it out loud to me too (in the alleyway) when she turned away from Chongo, she'd say 'Sit down. Look at your spots. Let's go to the South Point.' That's what she said every night. That little boost of confidence at the end—Let's go to the South Point—helped too. You've got to stay positive. I try to focus on what I do need to do and what it takes to execute it properly."

Jimmie Smith

Former WPRA Rookie of the Year Jimmie Smith is pretty laid back when it comes to her nerves at the rodeos. A lot of her "chill" comes from being an all-around hand growing up.

"I grew up roping and tying goats because you get to control how good you are by how hard you work; you don't have to have

I try to focus on what I do need to do and what it takes to execute it properly."

the $100,000 to go with it," she said. "In high school and college, those were my go-to events. I could work as hard as I wanted to be as good as I wanted."

"I think growing up like that...having to ride horses that were the best and trying to find Lena and season her, is the key. I think riding colts and horses that didn't always win has made me appreciate the good ones. I think it just gives you more reason to treat them well. On the mental side, it gives you that push to keep going when things aren't going well."

There have been times when Smith's confidence was shaken. The first was her rookie year when she didn't know the lay of the land along the rodeo road.

"I'm pretty laid back as far as being at the rodeos but I definitely wasn't my rookie year," she said. "I didn't get into a lot of the bigger rodeos early on and during the summer when I wasn't doing very well and at places like Cheyenne it was a lot harder. Then towards the end of the season when I was more like 'whatever happens, happens,' I did better."

Smith says it's especially important when you're going somewhere for the first time like she did her rookie year.

"It's always good to have someone to talk to so you can prepare as far as arena setups and what horses to ride and all of that," she said. "I've always been told and I like to have three good mentors. You can have too many, but it is nice to have other people to talk to. 'My mom and Jackie Jatzlau are my go-tos when I need to talk through something and when I'm on the road, Jana Bean has been amazing. I can call her and ask questions any time.'"

The second time she had her mental game heavily tested was at the Calgary Stampede when she had to get off her good horse Lena On The Rocks for the rest of the season.

"When I was told I could not run her and she was going home, my attitude flipped upside down," she admitted. "I had the worst attitude at practice before the Wild Card Round. It was embarrassingly terrible. I just had to regroup. When Lena went home it was hard to stay positive, but I never went home. I knew I had the horses to do it. It was just when and if we had time to click before October 1st."

However, that speed bump allowed her to be better set for the 2020 season. If it weren't for Lena getting hurt, she wouldn't be riding Marthas Bullion ("Pixie") and Lever Action ("Minnie") along with Lena this year.

"Everything happens for a reason," she said. "Lena needed the time off and she came back stronger than she was last year."

As for down the alley mental prep, Smith likes to get to rodeos early and do a mental walk through with her horse in the arena if she can.

"I like to at least walk through on whatever horse I'm on," she said. "Lena really benefits from it. You can walk through and move your body like you were making a run. As far as being in the alley, I pet Lena and say a little prayer. I don't really get too worked up."

First post-COVID19 PRCA rodeo to air this weekend

Watch more than a dozen world champs ride and rope live on-screen from Cave Creek (Arizona) Rodeo Days, May 22-24

The best of professional rodeo head to the desert this weekend to compete in Cave Creek, Arizona — the first PRCA rodeo held since the global coronavirus pandemic forced the postponement or cancellation of all spring rodeos.

The 43rd Annual Cave Creek Rodeo Days, postponed from its original March date, features three performances that aren't open to the public per CDC guidelines and Arizona Governor Doug Ducey's executive order. But set your DVR, because each performance will air live on The Cowboy Channel, May 22-24, and will stream live on any device via Cowboy Channel Plus.

"We're excited to 'kick open the chutes' and get live PRCA action back on The Cowboy Channel and our app, Cowboy Channel Plus," said Jeff Medders, president and general manager of the network. "Summer is so important to everyone involved in proroedeo, from the cowboys to the fans to the communities."

On-screen action will feature the likes of bronc-riding superstars Clayton Biglow, Orin Larsen, Taos Muncy, and Brody Cress — as well as some standout bulldoggers. Luke Branquinho rides into town with five gold buckles and Bear Pasco with a Super Bowl ring from his former tight-end job with the New York Giants. Other decorated champs scheduled to ride are Ryder, Rusty, Stetson and Spencer Wright. Plus, world champion Fallon Taylor joins fellow world titlist Nellie Miller in headlining the field of more than 150 barrel racers.

"We're thrilled to have been chosen as the nation's first live PRCA-sanctioned rodeo since our country was shut down," said Beth Cornell, president of Cave Creek Rodeo Days. "The rodeo community is resilient, and we're looking forward to welcoming back hundreds of competitors who rely on rodeos as their primary source of income."

Slack competition is likely to also be streamed via the app and boasts a tie-down roping for the ages. In a likely NFR preview, fans won't want to miss world champs Tuf Cooper and Haven Meged try to fend off young guns Ty Harris, Shad Mayfield, Taylor Santos, Marty Yates and John Douch.

Performances each night are live starting at 7:30 p.m. (Pacific). The Cowboy (COWBY) Channel can be found at Dish Network-232, Direct TV-603, or Cox-260, or watch on your phone or computer via the app, Cowboy Channel Plus. To download it, visit CowboyChannelPlus.com.

Womens Rodeo World Championship to Feature $750,000 Payout

-- World Championship Will Pay Equal Money in Each Discipline--

WCRA (World Champions Rodeo Alliance) and PBR (Professional Bull Riders) announced additional details today regarding the Women's Rodeo World Championship (WRWC), taking place at South Point Arena in Las Vegas on November 3-7.

The world championship event is open to any female athlete competing in break-away roping, barrel racing, team roping and will award a $750,000 guaranteed payout with equal money in all four disciplines. The event will also award a Women's Rodeo All-Around Champion.

All disciplines will feature two main pathways to the WRWC main event. Athletes who earn the top four spots on the WCRA Leaderboard at the end of the nomination period will be directly seeded into the main event while athletes 5-64 on the leaderboard will compete in a qualifying pool. The 60 athletes in the WCRA pool will compete in a three round progressive format with the top six advancing to the WRWC main event.

Nominations for the 2020 Women's Rodeo World Championship Leaderboard will start on May 18 at Noon CT and will close October 11 at 11:59 p.m.

Up to 16 athletes per discipline can earn a NWYI ("nominate, win, and you're in") seeding qualification in the WCRA pool through select events found here. The four fastest times in the NWYI fast track will earn a spot in the main event.

All athletes advancing through the WCRA Leaderboard and NWYI events will not be required to pay an entry fee.

Athletes will also have an opportunity to earn a spot in the main event through the "Open to the World Qualifying Pools", which will be split into pro and challenger divisions. All athletes in the Open to the World Qualifying Pools will compete in two rounds of competition with 18 athletes per pool advancing to the progressive round. Those who do not advance to the progressive round have the option to re-enter in a redemption round. The top 10 fastest times in the one-run progressive round will advance to the main event.

A total of 24 total positions in each discipline will be available in the main event with multiple combinations of pay-outs available throughout all stages.

The Women's Rodeo World Championship will be carried on RIDE-TV and RidePass, the PBR's western sport digital network.

Additional details on open entry and package details will be released at a later date.

PRCA CEO Talks About Rodeos Returning

ProRodeo being back in action Memorial Day weekend for competition is one of the topics PRCA CEO George Taylor discussed with The Cowboy Channel in an interview Saturday.

Taylor talked about COVID-19 pandemic ground rules that will have to be followed when PRCA rodeos return.

"We're going to have to really take that responsibility seriously as we begin to rodeo again, so that nobody stops us, even though we are frustrated with a lot of those things," he said. "It's really going to be about where we use masks, how we disinfect, how we compartmentalize different production personnel and really strive to keep ourselves safe so that we don't have any COVID instances as a result. Probably one of the biggest things is we will have to screen our contestants at Cave Creek as we get ready to go there."

Cave Creek (Ariz.) Rodeo Days is May 22-24 and will air live at 10:30 p.m. (ET) each night on The Cowboy Channel. Fans will not be permitted at the rodeo.

Moving forward, fans are expected to be able to attend rodeos at Woodward (Okla.) Elks Rodeo (June 10-13) and Strawberry Days Rodeo in Pleasant Grove Utah (June 17-20).

"Relative to the rodeos we expect to have fans, they will be at reduced capacity, those rodeos (Woodward, Okla., and Pleasant Grove, Utah), in addition to Springfield (Mo., May 29-30), have been given some initial approval to have fans, which really changes the experience for the contestants and everybody watching on television, so it will be a great addition," Taylor said.

RodeoHouston was canceled before completion because of the COVID-19 pandemic, but the PRCA is going to complete the rodeo with the Finishing Super Series Rodeos, May 29-31, in Fort Worth, Texas.

"This will not be the RodeoHouston we all know and love, but we will really be finishing up the Super Series from RodeoHouston, which is about seven performances," Taylor said. "We're going to broadcast that on The Cowboy Channel, obviously, and we are going to do it from Fort Worth, which is a little bit different, RodeoHouston from Fort Worth. So, we're excited about that, and we have had great support from the mayor's office in Fort Worth. It will be right in the backyard of Rural Media Group."

Taylor also spoke about the numerous payouts remaining in the season.

"The most exciting thing I can tell you is while it seems like we've missed a lot of rodeos, we still have about 90% of the payouts left in the season," Taylor said. "So, while we have had 137 rodeos canceled, we have a lot on the board, and we have 50 to 55 in June that are currently scheduled and 100 on the schedule for July. That time that we are coming up to is really important and as we're looking at this, a lot of the contestants are asking if we need to extend the season? What are we going to do about rodeo counts and all that type of stuff. Because of the numbers I just said, we're going to wait no later than July 1 before we can tell everybody what we are planning to do for the full year."

THIS WEEK'S NOTES

with Tracy Swan

Fun!

Well, we have a bunch barrel races starting to happen around the country! We are all able to go back to doing what we choose to do for Fun...barrel racing! In fact, the first pro rodeo back, Cave Creek, AZ is this weekend and will be Live on The Cowboy Channel May 22-24 at 10:30 pm ET. Also, they are going to finish the RodeoHouston SuperSeries, which were not completed due to the Covid-19 pandemic, in Fort Worth, TX, May 29-31 and that will also be on The Cowboy Channel (we will get details for next week's issue). More rodeos are on the horizon and there is a great list of the upcoming ones on www.WPRA.com, when you get to the homepage there is a big red bar that you click to get to the list.

With us getting more and more barrel results, we will changing back our Barrel Racing Report to a more normal format of event coverage and scaling back some of the extra stuff. It has been so fun to bring training articles so we will keep bringing them to you moving forward. However, the Retro Results and some of the other stuff about WPRA History and such will be getting phased out over the next couple weeks as we have more results to fit in. We have really enjoyed doing it all and hoped you have enjoyed all of it. We really appreciate our writers working so hard to share all that great information and the all the barrel racers who so kindly shared their knowledge. We would love to hear from you...just email us at BarrelRacingReport@gmail.com and let us know what you liked, didn't like, or would like to see us include and we will do our best to bring it to you.

Today I was just going to share something quick that Dusti and I talk about with our kids and their horses...Many times we have to stop and think about this statement from Zig Ziglar... "Kids go where there is excitement. They stay where there is love." ... We love our kids all the time no matter what, but many times in our own love for horses and drive to get more rode or more done, we don't take the time to make horses fun and exciting for them. Does anyone else do that?

I think for many of us we started out as kids just messing around with horses and we were able to ride horses and go to barrel races and rodeos in a way that was fun and exciting. However, as you get older you quickly realize if you want to actually win or succeed it takes a lot of time and dedication... So by the time your kids come along, we are so busy, have so much work to do and are so focused, we just simply forget to take the time to make it fun for our kids so that some day in the future; they want to be part of the horse business too. Now, many of you may not have children of your own, but what if you have family, friends, or interns that really want to be part of the business that you could influence? Just think about it, if we all make horses fun and exciting for 1 other person and they come into the barrel horse business, that doubles our industry! So saddle the horse for the 5 minute ride before the kid scampers off to the sand box or trampoline, go on trail rides through the pasture, or walk a couple more laps with them around the arena, head to a playday or barrel race they really aren't ready for so they can hang out with their friends, buy a nice older, gentle horse, and just take time to mess around a little and have some fun... along the way we all might remember why we love these horses and this business the way we do....

HEADIN' FOR HOME

by Sherry Morrison // Triple M (Mike Morrison Ministries)

Is spring here yet? Hard to tell in Wyoming. I read a funny thing the other day about "May". It MAY rain. It MAY snow. It MAY be warm. It MAY be cold. Sums it up for me! Since the trees aren't leafed out yet, MAYbe they know something I don't. LOL!

Okay, so what's the point? Spring is here. I can't see it most days, but the calendar says it's time. It's just right there, ready to POP up at a moment's notice.

It's the same with the blessing of God. He promised us in Deut. 28:1-2 that if we obey His voice, all the blessings in verses 3-14 will come upon us and overtake us! Big blessings!

Let's purpose in our hearts to listen to and obey His leading and His Word. We won't even have to turn around and look. Those blessings are coming! No MAYbe's about it!
